Investigation of hydro-electric sites in the State of Madras.

A systematic and scientific study of all water basins in the State is being made by the Government Electricity Department from maps and available records and possible hydro-electric schemes are noted down for their hydro-electric values. The hydro-dynamic value of a basin so worked out from maps and available records will have to be checked with actual rainfall and run off observations over a number of years, say about 20 years. This is expected to cost about Rs. 25 lakhs. A programme spread over a period of 10 years is contemplated. The first Five-year Programme will cover the most important river basins, the development of which will be more promising. An estimate for Rs. 12·5 lakhs for the first part of the above programme of hydro-metric surveys covering a period of 5 years has since been sanctioned by the Government. From a study of hydro-metric observations so obtained, basins likely to yield the best and most economical hydro-electric schemes are chosen for detailed investigation. Only after the detailed investigations are completed, project reports are prepared and sent up to Government for sanction.

2. Out of the four rivers mentioned in clause (a) of the question, Gundlakamma is included in the second Five-year Programme of hydro-metric surveys while in respect of the other three, viz., Manneru, Kalangi and Swarnamukhi, preliminary study has indicated that the hydro-electric possibilities are poor. The quantities of water available in these rivers are not appreciable. Except Kundah river which is a tributory of Bhavani (item No. 2 on page 18 of the Administration Report for 1949–50), none of the other schemes have been investigated.
